the authors write, “was the limited number of empirical investigations and teacher practitioner articles currently available for social studies educators who want to address the needs of exceptional learners in their classrooms.”

Darren Minarik and Timothy Lintner bring together the latest research in special education and social studies in this easy-to-use guide for educators at all levels from elementary through high school. The authors provide background information on categories of disability, and laws driving disability services in schools, and recommend best practices for educating these exceptional students in an inclusive classroom setting. The topics discussed include instructional design and strategy, assessment, classroom management, and the use of appropriate technology.

Minarik and Lintner offer carefully designed lesson plans for teaching economics, geography, history, and civics to exceptional learners at each of the elementary, middle, and high school levels. The lessons are aligned with the national social studies standards and the C3 Framework for social studies state standards. The authors also recommend important institutional and published resources that can assist with the education of exceptional learners.

Teaching the College, Career, and Civic Life (C3) Framework: Exploring Inquiry-Based Instruction in Social Studies

Edited by Kathy Swan and John Lee, with Rebecca Mueller and Stephen Day
NCSS Bulletin 114, 156 pp.

This book is an indispensable guide for teachers implementing the C3 Framework. The book consists of model lessons contributed by 15 of the best social studies curricular organizations. Each lesson encompasses the whole of the C3 Inquiry Arc from questioning to action, engages students in a meaningful content experience that fits a typical curriculum, and needs between 2 and 5 days of instruction. Students collaborate, practice disciplinary literacy skills, and present their findings creatively. There are lessons for all grade bands from K-2 to 9-12.

The 15 lessons cover the range of C3 disciplines. Contributors examine the meaning of national symbols, the need to vote, and democracy in schools. There are economic analyses of the causes of the Great Depression and the historical impact of technology on productivity, as well as geographic perspectives on conflicts over rivers and American Indian responses to environmental challenges. Authors use primary sources to introduce historical topics ranging from the U.S. Constitution, immigration, and women’s suffrage, to the collapse of democracy in Nazi Germany and the U.S. civil rights movement.

This book is an essential resource for teachers seeking to put the C3 Framework into action.

Becoming Integrated Thinkers: Case Studies in Elementary Social Studies

Edited by Linda Bennett and Elizabeth R. Hinde
National Council for the Social Studies, 128 pp., 2015

At a time when social studies is being curtailed in elementary schools, the contributors to this book show that it is still possible to teach social studies very well. The key strategy is one of effective integration, which requires significant planning and pedagogical knowledge, but has a tremendous payoff.

The contributors to this book identify the foundations of effective integration, outline strategies for achieving this goal, and present case studies of successful integration at different elementary grade levels. The book includes model lessons that advance the objectives of the recently published C3 Framework, as well as those of the national social studies standards and the Common Core State Standards for English Language Arts and Literacy. This book is a vital resource for elementary teachers, teacher educators, teacher candidates, curriculum directors, and professional development supervisors.

Edited by Syd Golston and Peggy Altoff
NCSS Bulletin 112, 118 pp., 2012

This book has been designed for elementary teachers who want to meet the common core reading standards as they teach social studies.

The class activities recommended in this book for each grade level allow teachers to accomplish the following objectives:

1. Achieve specific learning expectations outlined in the National Curriculum Standards for Social Studies.
2. Achieve specific objectives outlined in the Common Core Standards for Reading Literature (as well as selected other Common Core Standards)

This book’s opening chapters lay the groundwork for the effective teaching of standards-based social studies through the use of literature. Most of the volume consists of reviews and annotations of outstanding children’s books for the elementary grades.

The contributors show teachers how to make the most of timeless classics such as Make Way for Ducklings and The Little House, as well as more recent books, including You and Me Together, Nina Bonita, Show Way, The Unbreakable Code and Sarah, Plain and Tall.

National Curriculum Standards for Social Studies: A Framework for Teaching, Learning, and Assessment

Developed by the NCSS Task Force for Social Studies Standards
NCSS Bulletin 111, 171 pp., 2010

Published in September 2010, the revised national social studies standards are an essential resource for schools, social studies teachers, school districts and teacher education programs. They offer the framework for developing social studies programs that educate students in the skills and knowledge needed for college, careers, and 21st-century citizenship.

The revised standards, like the earlier social studies standards published in 1994, continue to be structured around the ten themes of social studies. However, the revised standards offer a sharper focus on:

• Purposes
• Questions for Exploration
• Knowledge: what learners need to understand
• Processes: what learners will be capable of doing
• Products: how learners demonstrate understanding

The revised standards also include:

• Enhancements in the descriptions of the ten themes and the associated learning expectations
• The addition of new descriptions of standards-based class practices to time-tested descriptions that were included in the original edition of the standards
• A stronger focus on student products and their assessment
• An updated list of essential social studies skills and strategies, including literacy strategies

This volume should be part of the core library of all social studies educators, schools and colleges.

Teaching Women’s History through Literature: Standards-Based Lesson Plans for Grades K-12
Kay A. Chick
NCSS Bulletin 107, 132 pp., 2008
Women used to be almost invisible in history books used in school, and although they now have a stronger presence in textbooks, teachers often have difficulty finding the right additional resources for teaching women’s history. Kay A. Chick’s publication fills an important gap by identifying appealing literature that will engage students in the study of women’s history. Biographies and historical fiction are the principal genres of literature selected. The author pays special attention to choosing developmentally appropriate books and lesson plans that can advance standards-based teaching at the primary, intermediate, middle school and high school grade levels.
